t increased fishing tah waterbodies

DWR Sportfish Coordinator Randy Oplinger said. "The intent of this regulation change is to provide anglers the opportunity to harvest and use additional fish before any potential fish loss."

The rest of the below changes are also effective immediately and will remain in effect until Oct. 31, 2021.

- Vernon Reservoir, Tooele County: Increasing the daily limit to eight trout
- Lower Bowns Reservoir, Garfield County: Increasing the daily limit to eight trout
- Middle Kents Lake, Beaver County: Increasing the daily limit to eight trout
- Puffer Lake, Beaver County: Increasing the daily limit to eight trout
- Minersville Reservoir, Beaver County: Removing the restrictions on the use of bait and the size of trout you can keep

"This summer, we are anticipating very low water levels at Minersville Reservoir and are expecting it to kill some fish," Oplinger said. "There is a conservation pool at Minersville, but it can't sustain the current amount of fish in the reservoir. We would like additional fish to be harvested to reduce the total amount of fish, so that some will survive in the conservation pool. While using bait to fish has previously been illegal, we want to open up Minersville Reservoir to anglers who are more harvest-oriented, so they can help reduce the amount of fish. This temporary regulation change is intended to protect the fishery and prevent a total fish loss, so the fishery can recover more quickly when drought conditions subside."
